FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Bermuda shouts!

Well its courts do and Justis will provide exclusive access to the reports

From 1st July Justis Publishing¹ will exclusively host the Bermuda Law Reports² on its intuitively searchable, full-text online legal library, Justis.

Previously available only on their own isolated website, the detailed judgments, which go back to 1986, bring Bermuda law into Justis Publishing's increasingly international mix of legal research material.

In a move that will benefit all common law practitioners and researchers, not just those in Bermuda, this offers users:

- An intuitive search platform and world-class results handling
- Searches that, if required, can include other elements of Justis's full catalogue, such as the Law Reports, Weekly Law Reports and legislation
- Court-ready, printable PDFs that replicate original pagination
- Links from Justis Publishing's provider-neutral citator, JustCite, where each report will be indexed and cross-referenced against other cases and legislation, showing how it sits within the common law at large Masoud Gerami, managing director of Justis Publishing, said: "The Bermuda Law Reports agreement is an indication of a trend where valuable content from smaller publishers can be placed alongside more mainstream case law and legislation databases on Justis. The arrangement relieves the publishers from the burden of maintaining their own platforms, which will hopefully lead to new or expanded content. It will also give Justis yet more relevant content to present to its prospects and customer base.”

Karen Skiffington, editor of the Bermuda Law Reports, said: “I am thrilled that the Bermuda Law Reports will be available now through Justis. Not only will my existing customers benefit by the improved interface and functionality, but new customers can be introduced to the service. Bermuda is an important jurisdiction in Commonwealth Law, especially in the areas of arbitration, insurance and reinsurance, general company matters and trusts. Justis and the Bermuda Law Reports are working together to bring law into the global community.”
